Aliturgical Days of the Holy Week:

In the Alexandrian tradition, Mass is not celebrated on the three days of Holy Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday because of the sorrow occasioned by the Passion when, indeed, the celebration of the Eucharist always retains a joyful character.

More deeply, this places us in the situation Adam (i.e. humankind, ourselves) was in before Jesus Christ came. Indeed, we should not take for granted our relationship with the Saviour but renew our awareness of all it changes in life.

Finally, Palm-Sunday corresponds to the 10th day of the new moon, when the Jews used to buy the one year old lambs for the feast of Passover. They kept the lambs at home for three days, and then kill them at sunset on Nisan 14th, Passover day. Similarly, the Lamb of God was mystically slain at the Last Supper on Holy Thursday before being crucified as the paschal lambs were being slaughtered.

(5): Readings for a Memorial

When for an Obligatory Memorial a proper Reading is given, in place of it a Reading from Ferial may not be used.

When for an Optional Memorial a proper Reading is given, and the Memorial is celebrated, in place of it a Reading from Ferial may not be used.

In all other cases, for the celebration of Memorials, it is possible (and advisable) to use Ferial Readings.

Note that a Reading given for a Memorial, if not proper, is just proposed from the Commons and, in place of it, any other Reading from the Commons may be chosen. And indeed for some Memorials different Lectionaries give different Readings. So, feel free to use the reading assigned for a Memorial in your Lectionary.

In this Calendar, when possible, indications are given to help find, in the lectionary, the proposed readings, especially for Memorials newly introduced in the General Calendar.
